In film or literature, Bikes Need Better Agents

By Murray Carpenter

SOME JOKER once said that there are really just two types of stories: a person takes a journey, and a stranger comes to town. There's a lot of truth to it. But why, in modern movies, do they never do either on a bicycle?

In the movies, it's okay to ride into town in a beat up Ford pickup, in a Corvette or on a Harley. It's fine to hit the road, Thelma-and-Louise style, in a big old convertible, or to follow your passions south of the border on a palomino. It's even acceptable to fly on Air Force One, a corporate jet, or a bush plane in Alaska or Africa. But not a bike.

You can do your business on a boat, the lone sailor against the seas or the swashbuckling pirate coming to bust up the harbor. Taxis are fine, especially for creepy films like Taxi Driver and Collateral.

But a bicycle? No. The hero never rides into town on a bike. Not on a ratty old mountain bike with a bedroll in a backpack, nor a natty touring bike with panniers fore and aft. Bikes, no doubt, need better agents.

Perhaps I overstate the case, for there have been a few exceptions. We all remember

Take it Easy

Brimfield in July Can be Very Fruitful

JULY in Brimfield is truly as unpredictable as New England weather can be. Of course, it can be hot, but July has also seen rain, heat, hail, wind and even a cold chill make their way to town. Luckily, dealers also still find their way to town in all kinds of weather. Many even report having their best shows in inclement weather!

As you might imagine, the heat alone reduces the total number of dealers and crowd size in July. The hardy and dedicated antique enthusiast soon sees this as an opportunity. Less competition for those undiscovered treasures, more time to recognize a "sleeper," and a more casual atmosphere to browse, give the July customer a reason to keep coming back whatever the weather.

Expenses for dealers and other travelers may be less in July. Yes, gas prices are indeed higher, but accommodations at local motels are generally more abundant. The weddings

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE!

You have just arrived in Brimfield and face a sea of dealers and merchandise. You are searching for Furniture and Sterling Silver. Begin your search by:

- 1. CATEGORIES: Begin your search by browsing the general category list on page 19. Choose a category and look for the heading listed alphabetically in this guide.
- 2. DEALERS: are listed alphabetically under each category heading. Each dealer listing contains three columns of information. You will find the dealer's name, the name of the show (abbreviated) where they display, and their booth number.

Sample:

DEALER	SHOW	BOOTH
Furniture Tim's Antiques	Mays	800
Sterling & Silver Plate Slim's Silver	Quaker	1000

3. FINDING A DEALER: After finding a dealer in your chosen category, refer to the color show map on pages 12 & 13 for the show's location. The show schedule on page 2 is helpful as different shows open on different days and times.

4. OTHER HELPFUL TIPS: When you arrive at a particular show and still cannot find the dealer or merchandise you are looking for, try asking the show promoter or a fellow dealer. They can be very helpful. Remember that you can do a more detailed category search on BrimfieldExchange.com from the comfort of your home.

General Information: During Brimfield week BrimfieldExchange operates an information building located across from May's Antique Market on Route 20, and provides internet access, maps and complimentary trade publications.

and graduations are over, and motel operators are a little hungrier than during the May and September shows. Tip from yours truly, a frugal traveler: find a motel 10 - 20 miles outside of Brimfield and you may save 30-50 percent on the cost of a room. Multiply the savings by two or three nights and direct those dollars to your antiques, food, and gas budget.

Many visitors arrive in campers or mobile homes in July. This is a great way to do Brimfield and incorporate the travel as part of a summer vacation. There are a number of campgrounds in and around Brimfield with hook ups. New England is a gorgeous place in the summer, with our green fields, outdoor concerts, beaches, and seaside restaurants. Take advantage of Brimfield's location only a couple of hours from the Atlantic coast.

Whatever your travel plans, be prepared to "Take it Easy" in July. The following is a short list of Brimfield necessities for doing Brimfield at any time, but especially in the New England summer.

1. SUNBLOCK – As a veteran Brimfielder, I highly recommend an SPF #30 or higher even if the weather prediction is cloudy or overcast. I am up each day by 4AM and as soon as I have had my cup of Joe, the SunBlock is on.
2. UMBRELLA – Rain is part of the picture in Brimfield so have one handy.
3. WATER – Bring plenty and stay hydrated
4. GOOD WALKING SHOES – I once wore a pedometer and tacked off 15,000 steps in half a day. Can you do this in sandals?
5. HAT – A full brimmed hat shields the eyes from the sun and if you are thinning like I am, you need the added protection.
6. SUN GLASSES – Polarized glasses work well and lessen the strain on the old retinas.
7. MAP – First timers should get a good Brimfield Map. Yes, you can get lost in this small town.
8. BICYCLE – Nothing beats a bicycle to get around from show to show. Find convenient parking and use your car as a home base.

Breaking Away, but that was about racing, not transportation. There was the Kevin Bacon movie Quicksilver, but that was about bike messengers, a quirky subculture. And who could forget the romantic scene in Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, with Paul Newman riding Katharine Ross on his handlebars to the tune of "Raindrops Keep Falling on My Head." But I suspect that movie sold more horses than bikes, by a long shot.

Bikes are sometimes used in BBC productions as props to identify a comical, bumbling sort. And a bike played a prominent role in Il Postino, but I suspect few people left the theater dreaming of mounting up and pedaling out for the territories.

Sadly, the best-known cinematic image of a bicycle is from The Wizard of Oz. Remember Dorothy's mean old neighbor flying her bike in a cyclone? How many bikes do you think that movie sold?

The trend extends beyond movies, to most American fiction. I've tried for years to sell a short story about a guy who rolls into a mountain town one quiet evening during mud season. A guy whose past is full of dark secrets, who knew the town 20 years earlier, before it, and he, had earned the ugly scars of hard living. A man, don't you know, on a bike. I've never sold it. (I should mention here that I've never sold any fiction, so I can't blame this on the bike alone, but it's comforting to think it's a factor.)

There may be hope yet. Ron McClarty's wonderful novel The Memory of Running is wrapped around a fine bike journey (it starts in Providence), and a movie is in the works.

But most bike riding, most functional bike riding, in the movies features children too young to have their driver's licenses. Think ET. Once folks are grown up, it seems, we are supposed to propel ourselves by burning petroleum.

In the movies and in real life, bikes simply play a negligible role in the modern American transportation system. It's a bit tragic. Because if we are going to crawl out of the hole we've dug ourselves into now that so many of us are driving several hours a day -- double-glazing the planet while increasing our isolation, clogging our idle arteries and paving over the countryside -- bikes will have to play a role. Bikes are great ways to roll from here to there while breathing fresh air, getting exercise and greeting neighbors. They are whisper quiet, relatively cheap and emit no greenhouse gasses.

Ah, but that's boring, isn't it. Give me Angelina Jolie in a helicopter, you say, or Tom Cruise in a muscle car.

Me, I'm waiting for the heroine of the next movie to come riding over the hill in the twilight on a bicycle, just in time to save the whole damn town.
