Dealers in Antiques & Collectibles Only!

At Brimfield, everyone has a favorite story.

At Brimfield, seemingly everyone is a collector.

I'm a collector too.

I collect stories.

My name is Bob Wyss and I am a writer. For 28 years I collected and told stories for the Providence Journal. Now I teach journalism at the University of Connecticut and I am at Brimfield collecting stories so that I can work on future magazine or book projects.

Perhaps the best stories have to do with the famous Brimfield "rush," the first couple of hours after a field has opened and in theory the best goods and the best deals are snatched up. With more than 20 fields at Brimfield there are plenty of "rushes." Although that theory does not always hold and many deals are found after the fields have long since opened. In this business knowledge is power. The early bird gets the worm but the tortoise wins the race.

Penny Phaneuf still marvels at the rush.

"Some years I would have six or seven people waiting to buy off of me," said Phaneuf. "Some would just throw hundred dollar bills at me after they decided what they wanted. They would say 'I can't wait, just hold it, I'll be back for my change'."

For some their best story is about the weather.

Setting an outdoor show in New England always guarantees the unpredictable when it comes to Mother Nature. In May you might get cold and rain, in July it is the heat and in September it can be anything.

Marie Doldarian who runs New England Motel remembers one September when a hurricane was careening down on Brimfield and the Massachusetts State Police wanted the fields closed.

Easier said than done.

"I had a terrible time getting people to leave," recalled Doldarian. "People just wanted to keep buying, even with a hurricane coming."

Sometimes the best story has to do with the quest for something new.

Joel Schiff is a well-known collector from New York who buys cast iron cookware. He has hundreds of pieces and now his quest is down to specific items. Last year when I saw him he said he needed a Japanese ceremonial teapot and a Hungarian coffee roaster.

"It's kind of like a passion, or even an obsession," Schiff explained.

Brimfield is known as the antiques show where you can buy anything.

Antiques dealer Howard Roberts has plenty of stories about unusual items he has brought to Brimfield, from Buffalo Heads to a propeller that came off of a World War I airplane. He brought the propeller last year and set it up along with a picture of the pilot and the aircraft it had powered. When the show opened, buyers excitedly examined it, fondled the shaft and fired questions at Roberts. The propeller was the first item he sold at Brimfield.

This will be Brimfield's 44th year. Most veterans say it has changed over the years but so has the market. Ebay is a new challenge, and the computer network and the new interest in antiques and collectibles has produced a larger market than in 1959 when Gordon Reid first invited his friends to Brimfield for the first show.

Some say the experience is still the best part of Brimfield as empty New England pastures turn into a teeming city for a few days three times a year.

"Brimfield is not great for prices, but the thing about Brimfield is that you can find things you might not find anywhere else," said Bob Page who runs a major antiques business, Replacements Limited out of Greensboro, NC and is a Brimfield regular. "There are no amateurs at Brimfield. It's not like you will stumble across an amazing deal. You might find what we call a sleeper, but that's the exception at Brimfield. Usually an item has already gone through five or six dealers by the time it gets to Brimfield. And it just keeps churning and churning."

Page built a mega business with some roots in Brimfield and he hopes to be at Brimfield again this year and I hope to meet him. Perhaps I will meet you too. If you have a story and want to share it with me, you can leave a message at my office where I also teach journalism at the University of Connecticut at 860 486-3030 or by email at robert.wyss@uconn.edu. Dust off that old typewriter, get out the old quill pen and contact me. We are all busy people, but I would love to hear your stories.

BrimfieldExchange Announces Hotel Drawing WINNER!

Each spring BrimfieldExchange updates the Brimfield Dealer Directory. Over 850 renewal postcards are mailed to the registered BrimfieldExchange dealers. Dealers are asked to renew their listing information with the postcard or via the online form available on the website. Submitting online renewals/updates and or registrations makes the job of organizing the listings much simpler. To show our BrimfieldExchange dealers how much we appreciate their online renewals/updates and registrations, we partnered with the Quality Inn of Sturbridge to offer FREE lodging for three nights during the May 2003 Brimfield Shows. The Quality Inn could have easily booked the rooms for over $400.00. Instead they chose to work with us. To qualify for this drawing, all dealers had to do was renew or register online by April 04, 2003. Many dealers participated.

We are happy to announce this year's winner:
Ed and Hilda Moody of Moody's Collectibles

Ed and Hilda have been in our Brimfield Dealer Directory since we began the Exchange in the spring of 2000, and currently exhibit at J & J Promotions. If you see Ed or Hilda in Brimfield, take a moment to congratulate them or perhaps sell them something as they now have a little more money to spend.

Baseball Memorabilia

My greatest inspiration and love of my life was my grandmother, Dottie Earl. I can remember her sitting on our porch overlooking Winter Harbor with her ear glued to an AM radio listening to a Red Sox game. Yaz and Rico were her favorites. Being a girl, I didn't love the game of baseball too much but I loved being with my grandmother. It's a good thing she taught me the game because now, 30 years later, I have 2 boys who love baseball.

My son Sterling and I watched the Red Sox opening day game and he couldn't wait to get home from school yesterday and tell me the Sox's won their second game. Game 3 - however, was canceled because of a Spring snow storm - but that's New England! Like many young boys Sterling started collecting Baseball memorabilia as a very young child. His original motivation like many kids was to get the gum. Luckily Sterlings grandfather was an antiquarian bookseller who would give him gifts of baseball books so Sterlings collection grew fast and furious throughout the years. We'd drag Sterling to auctions and his attention was always focused on the old baseball cards. Most adults don't bid against little kids so he got some pretty good deals through the years. The collection continues to grow as does his passion for the sport. We continue to build our collection and Sterling is always looking to purchase objects such as signed baseballs, books, autographs, photographs, early gloves or bats but many people ask us what to do with their old baseball memorabilia...cards in particular. I've finally found the solution!

Diamond King Sports Cards from Greenland, NH has built the most extensive inventory in the State of New Hampshire after 13 years in business. The owner is Jeff Lisbon who just happens to be the son of our new Shop Manager, Mimi Lisbon. The tough part of sports card collecting is knowing what cards are worth 10 cents and which ones are worth thousands. It's an incredibly deep field that requires tons of knowledge so dealing with someone with integrity is vitally important.

In an interview Jeff told me "Many issues come in to play in the valuation of cards such as, regional markets in which certain players are more popular. For example, Johnny Damon - a centerfielder for the Red Sox - is a fan favorite in the Boston area, and as a result sells very well.

However, on a national level, his sales are moderate. Is the player a rookie? How popular is the player, the team or the sport? Does the card hold a small piece of game-used memorabilia? Many companies are now inserting small pieces of bats, balls and even pieces of jerseys used during play."

Jeff continued " It's a constantly evolving trade, from back when the chewing gum was inserted in the packs and was the main reason for the purchase to more recent years when they removed the gum due to the staining of the cards. Most recently a

3) A round of golf with Tiger Woods was auctioned in April for a cool $425,000.

DK Sports sells all sorts of other sports memorabilia as well such as mini helmets, cereal boxes, limited edition plaques, magazines, yearbooks and old Sports Illustrated, card collecting supplies, figurines and starting lineups.

Sports card collecting is a great collecting hobby to enjoy. It can often foster bonds between generations in families. Older people can collect their memories, while children can collect their first experience with professional sports. And as I've learned personally, it's not just a game for boys.

Teach your girls, they may just have a son or grandson to share with. By Spring 2004, it looks like Manchester will be seeing a Major League Team all it's own. To research a favorite player or general statistical information Sterlings favorite website is <http://www.baseballhalloffame.com>. To reach Jeff Lisbon from Diamond King Sports a phone call to 603-431-8311 or an email at dksports@attbi.com will find him. If you have sports memorabilia other than Sports Cards, my son Sterling can be reached at fireant@antiquebug.com or at Fireflies Furniture & Art on Saturdays which is located at 71 Pine Hill Road in Wolfeboro. As always, I remain Doodlebug@antiquebug.com. Pray for our troops.

1952 Red Sox baseball signed by the entire team, including Ted Williams. A Sykes family heirloom.

One of Sterlings prized objects is an autographed George Bush baseball card distributed while Bush was campaigning for President in New Hampshire. Only time will tell us the value of this card - Will Bush be seen as a good president or not? 1952 Red Sox baseball signed by the entire team, including Ted Williams. A Sykes Family heirloom.

product called Topps Heritage was issued to include a wrapped piece of gum which quickly brought back old memories. Watching people bite into the gum was like watching them be instantly transported back to the days they bought their first pack. I remember when...was often the first words they said after tasting it".

The Cincinnati Red Stockings became America's first professional baseball team on May 4, 1869. If you've ever wondered - The top three sports items ever sold on ebay. . . The top three, in order, according to USA Today:

- 1) A Honus Wagner baseball card, which sold for $1.2 million in July 2000
- 2) A bat signed by legendary baseball player "Shoeless" Joe Jackson brought $577,610 in August 2001
