Welcome to Brimfield & BrimfieldExchange

This month's cover is a cut out of the Village of Brimfield from the ATLAS OF SURVEYS, Hampden County, Massachusetts, 1894. This was a time when there were no Antique Markets, roads were dirt and a stage line went through the center of town.

Since antiques and history are inseparable I thought it would be interesting to point out some of the more familiar buildings. Those that are easy to recognize are the large white Congregational Church that heads the west end of the town common and the Town Hall across the street from the church. Still thriving is the Hitchcock Free High School (Academy) located at the opposite end of the common from the church, next to Soldiers Monument. Other buildings include the H.L. Converse Store, which is now the Brimfield Post Office, the F.D. Lincoln property that is now J & J Promotions and the E.E. Livermore property which is now Crystal Brook. Most notably missing today from the 1894 landscape is the large white hotel with porch that was across from the Hitchcock Academy. The Woodbine Country Store is now located at the site of J.T. Brown.

For those of you who love maps, please feel free to stop by the BrimfieldExchange tent during the shows and view the 1894 map of Brimfield. Perhaps you too have a photo or some Brimfield history to share.

See you in Brimfield,

Tim May
